

Moran Offers Weekly Email Updates

Encourages Kansas to Visit Web Page

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Congressman Jerry Moran today announced that he has a weekly email update available to Kansans in the First District. Sent out each Monday morning, the email update discusses Moran's activities in Washington, D.C. and in Kansas over the previous week. The newsletter works to better inform Kansans on the Congressman's activities and improve communication.

"Whether it's for news, weather or to communicate, the internet and computers are becoming a larger part of our daily lives," Moran said. "I hope that Kansans will find my website and the weekly email newsletter a useful tool in sharing information and staying informed about my efforts in Washington, D.C."

Moran encourages people to visit his web page at www.house.gov/moranks01/ . There, Kansans can learn more about current issues facing Congress, read press releases and sign up for the email update.

Since October of 2001, when the threat of anthrax brought mail delivery to a halt on Capitol Hill, regular mail delivery has been slowed considerably to Congressional offices. Mail is being received, but sometimes delayed by days and even weeks.

"There is no doubt that life is different since September 11, but my priority remains the same - to work on the issues important to the survival of rural Kansas, including health care, small business, agriculture, transportation and education, and the protection of our way of life," Moran said. "These priorities now take on new meaning as we deal with the security issues facing our nation."
